These kiosks are typically placed in physical locations such as retail stores, restaurants, or hotels, and are designed to gather real-time feedback from customers.

The kiosk usually consists of a touch screen interface where customers can answer a series of questions or rate their experience using a scale. The questions can vary depending on the business and the specific goals of the customer satisfaction program. Common questions may include ratings for overall satisfaction, product quality, customer service, cleanliness, and likelihood to recommend the business to others.
