The global Dairy Product Production Line market size is predicted to grow from US$ 1480 million in 2025 to US$ 1933 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 4.0% from 2026 to 2032.

In 2024, global In 2024, global Dairy Product Production Line production reached approximately 328 units , with an average global market price of around US$ 4.5 million per unit. The Dairy Product Production Line is an automated continuous production system that integrates pretreatment, processing, filling, and packaging. It primarily processes raw materials such as cow's and goat's milk to produce liquid milk, yogurt, cheese, and milk powder. Its core processes include raw material inspection and acceptance, milk filtration and purification, standardization and homogenization, pasteurization or ultra-high temperature (UHT) sterilization, fermentation (for yogurt, etc.), concentration and drying (for milk powder), forming and packaging (for cheese), and CIP cleaning. The production line is highly integrated, encompassing key equipment such as separators, homogenizers, sterilizers, fermentation tanks, and fillers. It utilizes a PLC or SCADA system for fully automated control and quality monitoring. Modern production lines emphasize efficiency, safety, and flexibility, adapting to a wide range of product types while meeting stringent hygiene standards such as HACCP and GMP to ensure product nutritional value and shelf life. Its design must balance production capacity, energy efficiency, and environmental requirements, making it a core infrastructure for modern dairy production.

The Dairy Product Production Line's global supply chain has a clear structure, with close upstream and downstream connections. Upstream suppliers include raw material and basic component suppliers, including stainless steel (such as ArcelorMittal), food-grade pipes, valves, pumps (such as Grundfos), motors, and automated control systems (such as Siemens and Rockwell). Downstream customers include globally renowned dairy product manufacturers such as Nestl?, Lactalis, Danone, Meiji, Yili, and Mengniu. These companies purchase production lines to expand capacity, upgrade technology, or develop new products. The supply chain typically operates by downstream dairy companies ordering customized complete lines based on production needs, producing and integrating them, and ultimately delivering and providing ongoing technical service and parts support to ensure the efficient and safe processing of dairy products worldwide.
