Disposable soup bags for takeout are designed specifically for food delivery and takeout scenarios. Made from food-grade plastic, multi-layer composite films, or biodegradable and environmentally friendly materials, they are soft, airtight packaging containers for single use only and cannot be reused. They are primarily used for holding, sealing, and delivering liquid/semi-liquid food ingredients such as hot soup, broth, porridge, sauces, and hot pot base. They possess core characteristics such as high temperature resistance, leak-proofness, pressure and impact resistance, portability, and easy filling. They can withstand the bumps, compression, and high temperatures encountered during takeout delivery and are widely used in online takeout platforms and restaurant takeout and instant delivery services for soups. They must also meet national food contact material safety standards.

The upstream raw materials for disposable soup bags include basic resins (PE, PP, PET), functional materials (aluminum foil, EVOH barrier layer, adhesive), biodegradable materials (PLA, PBAT, starch-based), and accessory systems (spit, valve, easy-tear opening). The midstream process includes film material preparation, bag making (forming), heat sealing, perforation/spit installation, testing, and packaging. Downstream applications are mainly in food delivery platforms, chain restaurants, and pre-prepared meal manufacturers.

In 2025, global sales of disposable takeaway soup bags reached 6.566 billion pieces, with a production capacity of approximately 8.2 billion pieces. The average selling price was US$0.09 per piece, and the average gross profit margin was approximately 25%.
