A double jacketed gasket is a type of gasket designed for high-pressure and high-temperature applications. It consists of three main components: an inner soft filler material, an outer metal jacket, and typically, an additional corrugated or serrated metal ring in between.

Double jacketed gaskets are commonly used in industries such as oil and gas, chemical processing, petrochemical, power generation, and other applications that involve high-pressure and high-temperature environments. They are particularly suitable for flange connections where reliable sealing is required under demanding operating conditions.

The design and materials of double jacketed gaskets can be customized based on the specific requirements of the application, including the type of media, temperature range, pressure rating, and flange specifications. This allows for optimal sealing performance and long-lasting reliability in challenging industrial environments.
