The global Drone Instant Delivery Service market size is predicted to grow from US$ 804 million in 2025 to US$ 4111 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 26.8% from 2026 to 2032.

Drone instant delivery service is a rapidly developing delivery method that utilizes drones to transport goods, aiming to offer customers faster and more convenient delivery experiences. In the beginning, drone delivery was mainly used for emergency supplies and special goods. But in recent years, with the development of low - altitude economy, its application scenarios have continuously expanded. Many companies have started to use drones to deliver common goods such as food, daily necessities, and medical products.

High - precision navigation technology (RTK + visual obstacle avoidance) is maturing, enabling centimeter - level positioning. Long - endurance battery technology is advancing, and hydrogen fuel cells are in the experimental stage. Solid - state batteries are expected to be commercialized by 2030, potentially increasing the endurance to 300 km. It is integrating with technologies such as autonomous driving and smart city systems to form an integrated air - ground intelligent logistics system. Through the Internet of Things, big data, and other technologies, it is deeply integrated with urban infrastructure to improve operating efficiency. Modular design and scalability are becoming important technical development trends. This allows for seamless integration with other key programs and platforms, and enables the development of highly customizable and adaptable solutions to meet various market demands.

Many countries are relaxing regulations to allow drones to operate, opening up more airspace for drone delivery services. For example, China and the United States, which are piloting the opening of low - altitude airspace, are expected to be the main growth areas. In China, Hunan has become the country's first province for low - altitude flight trials, accumulating experience in low - altitude airspace supervision and operation management.
