Edge Glued Solid Wood Panel is a wood product made by bonding multiple solid wood boards together along their edges to create a larger, wider panel. This method uses strong adhesives to securely join the boards, resulting in a stable, durable surface that maintains the natural look and feel of real wood. Edge glued panels are commonly used in furniture making, cabinetry, countertops, and decorative applications. They offer improved dimensional stability compared to single wide boards, helping to minimize warping, cupping, and cracking. The panels can be made from various hardwood or softwood species and are valued for their strength, aesthetic appeal, and efficient use of raw materials.
