An education management system (EMS) is a software platform used by schools, universities, training institutions, education groups, and education authorities to digitally manage teaching, students, teachers, courses, examinations, admissions, finance, academic affairs, personnel, and campus resources. Its core objective is to improve the operational efficiency, teaching quality, and decision-making capabilities of educational institutions through information technology and automation, achieving full lifecycle management from student admissions, student registration, curriculum scheduling, online learning, examination and assessment, performance analysis to graduation management. Modern EMS typically integrates Student Information Systems (SIS), Learning Management Systems (LMS), Enterprise Resource Planning (ERP), online examinations, parent-teacher communication, data analysis, and AI-assisted teaching functions, and supports cloud deployment, mobile access, and cross-campus collaborative management, becoming a crucial infrastructure for the digital transformation of education.

With the global development of digital education, the widespread adoption of online learning, AI-powered education, blended learning, and lifelong learning systems, the EMS market is experiencing rapid growth. Educational institutions are increasingly reliant on digital platforms to achieve resource sharing, personalized student learning path management, teacher performance evaluation, and data-driven decision-making. Meanwhile, governments worldwide continue to promote the development of smart campuses, digital campuses, and educational informatization, encouraging K-12, higher education, and vocational training institutions to expand their EMS (Education Management System) deployments. In the future, generative AI, learning analytics, adaptive learning, digital certificates, and educational big data technologies will further enhance the value of education management systems, transforming them from traditional administrative tools into intelligent education operation platforms integrating teaching, management, evaluation, and decision-making.
