An end tipping trailer, also known as an end dump trailer or simply a tipper trailer, is a type of trailer commonly used in transportation and construction industries. It is designed to transport and unload loose materials such as sand, gravel, aggregates, and construction debris.

The construction industry is a major driver for the end tipper trailer market. These trailers are essential for transporting and unloading materials such as sand, gravel, and construction debris at construction sites. As construction activities increase, so does the demand for end tipper trailers. Government investments in infrastructure development projects, such as road construction, bridges, and dams, drive the demand for end tipper trailers. These trailers are used to transport large quantities of materials required for such projects, making them crucial for infrastructure development.
