The global Enterprise Talent Acquisition & Management Software market size is predicted to grow from US$ 9368 million in 2025 to US$ 18460 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 10.4% from 2026 to 2032.

Enterprise talent acquisition and management software is a type of digital human resources tool that integrates functions such as recruitment, onboarding, performance management, development, compensation, and talent analysis. It aims to help companies efficiently attract, evaluate, develop, and retain talent. With increasing competition in the labor market, the widespread adoption of remote work, and the maturity of AI technology, this type of software has become a core infrastructure for modern enterprises to build agile organizations and improve human resource efficiency.

The rapid development of the enterprise talent acquisition and management software market stems from both the deepening understanding of human capital value among enterprises and the digital transformation of organizational management. On the one hand, fierce competition for talent, employees' high demands for transparency and personalized experiences in career development, and the widespread adoption of remote/hybrid work models are driving enterprises to build more agile, data-driven talent management systems. On the other hand, traditional HR management can no longer meet the needs of strategic implementation, and organizations urgently need to achieve closed-loop operation of the entire lifecycle from recruitment, performance, learning to succession planning through an integrated platform to improve efficiency, reduce turnover, and support business growth. Meanwhile, the maturity of the HR SaaS ecosystem, the application of AI technology, and the deep adaptation of local vendors to compliance and management scenarios have significantly lowered the deployment
