EO sterilization indicator tape is an indicator material used for monitoring the ethylene oxide (EO) sterilization process. It is usually pasted on the outside of the packaging of items that require sterilization. This tape contains special chemicals or indicator dyes that are sensitive to ethylene oxide gas. In the process of ethylene oxide sterilization, when certain sterilization conditions are reached (such as appropriate temperature, humidity, time, and ethylene oxide concentration), the indicator on the tape will change color, which intuitively displays whether the item has undergone effective ethylene oxide sterilization treatment, making it easy for staff to quickly identify the sterilization effect and ensure the quality and safety of the sterilized item.
