ESD (Electro-Static Discharge) vinyl tile is primarily composed of vinyl polymer, usually polyvinyl chloride (PVC). PVC provides the basic structure and physical properties of the tile. It offers flexibility, durability, and resistance to chemicals and abrasion. The vinyl base allows the tile to withstand heavy foot traffic, the movement of equipment, and exposure to various substances without significant damage. To achieve electrostatic-discharge-resistant properties, specific antistatic agents are incorporated into the vinyl formulation. These can include carbon - based materials such as carbon black, metal oxides like zinc oxide or titanium dioxide, or conductive polymers.
