The face-scanning payment terminal is a payment terminal device that integrates facial recognition technology. It realizes a fast and convenient payment experience by identifying and verifying the user's facial features. When paying, the user only needs to face the terminal camera, and the system will automatically capture their facial features and compare them with the information in the database to complete the identity verification and payment operation.

As technology continues to mature and the market continues to expand, the application scenarios of face-scanning payment terminals will become more extensive. In addition to traditional retail, catering and public transportation fields, it may also expand to more fields, such as airport security, hotel check-in, etc. With the advancement of artificial intelligence algorithms and camera hardware technology, the accuracy of face recognition will gradually increase, and the market size of face-scanning payment terminals will continue to grow.
