The global Felt Fabric market size is predicted to grow from US$ million in 2025 to US$ million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of %from 2026 to 2032.

Felt Fabric is a non-woven fabric made by heating, moistening, and compressing wool or other fibers. Unlike woven fabrics, felt has no visible yarn structure and is formed by the interlocking and compression of fibers into a dense material. Felt fabric is known for its excellent insulation, sound absorption, and abrasion resistance, and is widely used in clothing, home décor, and industrial applications. The production process of felt is relatively eco-friendly, as it does not require weaving or knitting and often avoids chemical treatments.

The use of felt fabric is becoming increasingly popular due to its unique physical properties and environmental benefits. In home décor, felt is used for making carpets, wall coverings, and furniture upholstery, appreciated for its excellent sound absorption and comfortable texture. In fashion design, felt is valued for its warmth and shaping ability. Additionally, with the rising demand for sustainable materials, the market for felt fabric is expanding, with manufacturers exploring more eco-friendly and innovative production methods, such as using recycled fibers and natural dyes.
