The global Fishing Wire Rope market size is predicted to grow from US$ 466 million in 2025 to US$ 506 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 1.2% from 2026 to 2032.

Fishing wire rope is a high-strength wire rope designed for marine fishing, aquaculture and fishing boat operations. It is widely used in trawling, anchoring, cables, hoisting and fishing gear fixing. It is usually made of galvanized or stainless steel to enhance corrosion resistance and seawater erosion resistance, ensuring stable performance in high humidity, high salt and high tension working environments. Fishing wire rope has excellent tensile strength, wear resistance and flexibility, and can withstand repeated bending and impact in long-term operations, ensuring the safety and efficiency of fishing operations.

The global market for steel wire ropes for fishing has grown steadily, driven by the expansion of deep-sea aquaculture, the upgrading of deep-sea fishing technology and the intelligentization of fishing equipment. The core driving force on the demand side comes from the growth of global aquatic product consumption (per capita consumption in 2030 will increase by 15% compared with 2023), the large-scale application of deep-sea aquaculture facilities (such as deep-sea cages and aquaculture vessels) (China's 'Blue Granary' plans to invest more than US$20 billion) and the modernization of deep-sea fishing fleets (such as tuna purse seine vessels and squid fishing boats. The replacement cycle of steel wire ropes is shortened to 2 years). In terms of regional distribution, Asia-Pacific (led by China, Japan, and Southeast Asia) accounts for more than 50% of the global share, and demand in Northern Europe (Norwegian salmon farming), Latin America (Peruvian anchovy fishing) and Africa (West African deep-sea fishery development) has increased significantly, and the North American market has a relatively slow growth rate due to environmental regulations.

Analysis of core influencing factors:

Iteration of corrosion-resistant and lightweight technologies: The marine environment with high salt spray, high humidity and biological attachment (barnacles, algae) drives the steel wire rope to upgrade to high strength (above 1770MPa), corrosion resistance (galvanized aluminum alloy coating, 316L stainless steel material) and lightweight (30% weight reduction of composite fiber core). The penetration rate of surface treatment technology (such as epoxy resin coating to resist biocorrosion) and intelligent monitoring (sensors to detect wear and wire breakage in real time) has been improved, which can extend the service life to more than 5 years and reduce maintenance costs by 40%.

Cost fluctuations and supply chain risks: On the raw material side, the price of high-carbon steel wire is dominated by iron ore pricing power (Vale, Rio Tinto) and energy costs (the increase in natural gas prices in 2023 will push up European steel prices by 20%).
