Fixed seating refers to a type of seating furniture that is designed to remain in place and is typically stationary. It is often used in public spaces such as restaurants, cafes, and meeting rooms, providing a fixed and reliable seating option for customers or attendees. Fixed seating typically consists of individual seats arranged in rows or clusters, with no ability to be moved or repositioned. It provides a consistent and organized seating arrangement that is suitable for dining, conferencing, or other activities that require a fixed seating layout.

The industry trend of fixed seating is towards increased customization and versatility. With the rise of technology and the demand for unique seating experiences, manufacturers are introducing new designs and materials to cater to diverse customer needs. Some key trends include: Ergonomic designs: Providing optimal support for the body's weight and posture; Modular systems: Offering flexibility to create customized seating arrangements that can be easily rearranged or expanded as needed. Integrated technology: Merging fixed seating with technology such as connectivity options and integrated displays to enhance the overall experience and functionality of the seating.
