The global Foscarnet market size is predicted to grow from US$ million in 2025 to US$ million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of % from 2026 to 2032.

Foscarnet is a synthetic guanine analog with antiviral properties. It is used to treat infections caused by herpes simplex virus (HSV) types 1 and 2, varicella-zoster virus (VZV), and cytomegalovirus (CMV). Foscarnet competitively inhibits the herpesvirus DNA polymerase, which is essential for viral DNA synthesis. It is considered for use in immunocompromised patients, such as those with AIDS or following organ transplantation, where HSV infections can be life-threatening. Foscarnet is typically administered intravenously and can have toxic side effects, including kidney and liver damage, due to its ability to bind to and damage cellular DNA.

United States market for Foscarnet is estimated to increase from US$ million in 2025 to US$ million by 2032, at a CAGR of % from 2026 through 2032.

China market for Foscarnet is estimated to increase from US$ million in 2025 to US$ million by 2032, at a CAGR of % from 2026 through 2032.
