Full-body wetsuits are wet, insulated garments that cover the torso and limbs. Made of neoprene foam, they are insulated by a trapped water layer. They typically range in thickness from 3 to 7 mm. Their core functions include scratch and sting protection, as well as maintaining body temperature. They are suitable for recreational diving and water sports in water temperatures between 10°C and 28°C.Major manufacturers in the industry have an average annual production capacity of approximately 50,000 to 80,000 units per line. Gross profit margins vary significantly depending on material and brand, ranging from approximately 25% to 35% for basic models to over 40% for high-end, environmentally friendly materials (such as Yulex natural rubber) or customized models.

The upstream supply chain includes rubber chemical raw materials (DuPont provides the foamed neoprene), nylon linings (INVISTA), and waterproof zippers (YKK). Downstream, these garments are sold through diving equipment distributors (Decathlon) and specialized brands (Scubapro and Cressi) to dive centers, tourist attractions, and military procurement agencies.
