Game customer service outsourcing means that companies transfer the game customer service work that they were originally responsible for to professional third-party service providers. This outsourcing model is becoming more and more common in the game industry, because with the continuous expansion of the game market and the intensification of competition, game companies need to focus more on the core business of game development and operation, and outsource non-core businesses such as customer service to professional teams to improve efficiency and reduce costs.

The global Game Customer Service Outsourcing market size is projected to grow from US$ 726 million in 2024 to US$ 884 million in 2030; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 3.3% from 2024 to 2030.
