A gaming mouse is a computer input device optimized for gaming scenarios, typically featuring high-performance optical sensors, low-latency connectivity, programmable buttons, lightweight structures, and software-based customization. Compared with standard PC mice, gaming mice place greater emphasis on tracking precision, response speed, ergonomics, and durability for FPS, MOBA, MMO, and general e-sports applications. In 2025, Global gaming mouse sales are estimated at 54 million units, with an average ex-works price of 26 US$/Unit and global capacity is about 82 million units per year, with a gross margin range of 18%-32%.

The gaming mouse market is mainly driven by the continued expansion of PC gaming and e-sports, together with users' increasing willingness to pay for lighter, faster, and more precise peripherals. Official product pages from major brands consistently emphasize high-DPI optical sensors, high polling rates, wireless low-latency performance, and ergonomic specialization, showing that the category is increasingly differentiated by competitive gaming needs rather than by simple mouse replacement demand.
