The Garment-On-Hanger (GOH) System is a specialized logistics and transportation method used primarily in the fashion and apparel industry to transport garments while keeping them hung on hangers, rather than folded in boxes. This system preserves the shape, quality, and appearance of the clothing, reducing the need for ironing or steaming upon arrival. GOH systems are commonly used in supply chains involving high-end or wrinkle-sensitive garments, such as suits, dresses, and coats. They are integrated into trucks, containers, and warehouses with rails or racking systems, enabling efficient handling, sorting, and direct-to-store delivery, thereby streamlining operations and reducing labor costs.
