Ginseng instant tea is an instant beverage produced through modern processing techniques. It retains the main active components of ginseng (such as ginsenosides), providing traditional benefits such as relieving fatigue, enhancing immunity, and improving energy. It also addresses the problems of the traditional consumption method of ginseng, which is cumbersome, time-consuming, and difficult to control the dosage. Ultimately, it offers users a convenient, efficient, and standardized daily health care option. The upstream supply chain mainly includes ginseng cultivation, raw material procurement and extract processing, involving agricultural cultivation, raw material trade, and biological extraction processes; the downstream supply chain covers product production (mixing, drying, packaging), brand distribution (through e-commerce, supermarkets, etc.) to end consumers. In 2025, the output of ginseng instant tea is approximately 600 tons, with an average price of about 550 US dollars per kilogram, a gross profit margin of about 40%, and a single production line capacity of 15 tons per year.
