Abstracts

The global Global Capability Center (GCC) as a Service market size is predicted to grow from US$ 1724 million in 2025 to US$ 2754 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 7.0% from 2026 to 2032.

To address the challenges faced by multinational corporations in their global operations, such as the huge investment required for building overseas capability centers, long site selection and team building cycles, complex cross-cultural management, and difficulty in quickly adapting to business changes, Global Capability Center (GCC) as a Service has emerged. With the deepening of globalization and the maturity of digital technologies, especially cloud collaboration tools, the enterprise service model is undergoing a profound transformation from self-building to outsourced operations. Currently, GCC as a Service has developed into an end-to-end, subscription-based solution covering strategic consulting, site selection and establishment, talent recruitment, process building, daily operations, and continuous optimization. It is widely used in the offshore, nearshore, or onshore deployment of core functions such as enterprise IT research and development, data analysis, financial sharing, supply chain optimization, and customer support. It helps enterprises build a flexible and scalable global capability network with lower initial costs, faster startup speed, and higher operational efficiency, allowing them to focus on core business innovation and strategic growth.
