The upstream segment of this service includes manufacturers of refrigerated vehicles and refrigeration units, suppliers of refrigeration equipment, providers of temperature control and monitoring systems, and energy maintenance service providers. The midstream is managed by cold chain logistics operators and transportation service providers, responsible for transport coordination, temperature control management, in-transit monitoring, warehouse-to-distribution coordination, and emergency response; The downstream primarily serves food processing and trading companies, fresh food e-commerce platforms, pharmaceutical and vaccine enterprises, frozen food brands, and cross-border trade clients. It ensures product quality, reduces losses, and extends shelf life through a stable cold chain.
