A green bean coffee roaster is a piece of equipment used to roast green coffee beans into drinkable coffee. During the roasting process, the coffee beans undergo a series of physical and chemical changes, including expansion, discoloration, and the release of aromatic substances, ultimately forming the roasted coffee with the various flavors and tastes we are familiar with. Green bean coffee roasters are usually designed to allow users to adjust the roasting time and temperature according to personal preference to achieve different flavors from light roasts to dark roasts. These roasters come in a variety of types, including small home use models and large commercial models, suitable for different roasting needs.
