HDMI Active Optical (AOC) Cables is a new standard for HDMI which does exactly the same thing as a standard HDMI cable, with one major difference, which is very important for installers. AOC HDMI cables allow for lossless signal transfer over far greater distances than copper HDMI cables - and even HDMI UTP baluns!

As technology continues to evolve, the need for longer transmission distances without signal degradation has made AOC solutions increasingly appealing. The demand for HDMI AOC technology is particularly pronounced in sectors such as entertainment, education, and telecommunications. With the global push towards high-definition content consumption, industries are seeking reliable and efficient means to transmit large amounts of data over long distances. AOC solutions offer several advantages over traditional copper cables, including reduced weight, increased flexibility, and immunity to electromagnetic interference. In fact, the International Telecommunication Union reports that high-definition video streaming is expected to account for over 80% of global internet traffic by 2025, which will undoubtedly influence the HDMI AOC market positively.
