The global Headless CMS Software market size is predicted to grow from US$ 205 million in 2025 to US$ 573 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 15.9% from 2026 to 2032.

Content Management System (CMS) software without external devices refers to a platform that enables content creation, editing, publishing, and management without relying on local hardware deployment, through the cloud or web. It supports multi-terminal access and collaborative operation and is widely used in websites, applications, and digital content operations.

Upstream mainly includes cloud computing infrastructure, database technology, development frameworks, AI tools, and cybersecurity service providers; downstream mainly covers content management application scenarios such as corporate websites, e-commerce platforms, media publishing, educational institutions, government portals, and digital marketing.

In the future, the global market for peripheral-free CMS software will accelerate its development towards cloud-native, low-code, and intelligent technologies. Enterprises' increasing demand for multi-channel content distribution and digital operations is driving the evolution of CMS from single-website management to a central hub for omnichannel content. Simultaneously, AI-generated content, personalized recommendations, and automated operational capabilities are gradually being integrated into systems, improving content production efficiency and user experience. With the normalization of remote collaboration and the accelerated digitalization of SMEs, the penetration rate of SaaS-based CMS will continue to rise, and industry competition will revolve around ecosystem integration, scalability, and security compliance.
