Hinged door mortise locks are a common type of door lock designed to be fixed to the hinges of a door to increase the security and protection of the door. It usually consists of two parts: the mortise core and the lock body.

Hinged door mortise locks provide security and protection, increasing the door's theft resistance. When using a hinge door mortise lock, first determine the installation position of the mortise core and the lock body, and then insert the mortise core into the door hinge hole to ensure that the mortise core matches the lock body completely. When you need to lock the door, insert the mortise core deep into the hinge hole, and then turn the lock body to tightly combine with the mortise core. It is important to note that hinged door mortise locks are designed to match the shape and size of the door's hinge holes, and that the material and construction of the door and door frame must be strong enough to withstand the force of the lock.
