Honing is a process in which a grinding wheel is pressed against and rotated on the internal surface of a cylindrical part, with a significant amount of cutting oil applied. This method is similar to internal grinding, which also utilizes a grinding wheel to finish the internal surface of a workpiece. However, honing allows for a larger contact area between the grinding wheel and the workpiece's internal surface, achieving higher precision in terms of cylindricity, roundness, and surface roughness. As a result, honing is especially suitable for machining parts requiring high precision, such as automobile engine cylinders.
