The global Hospital Bed Rental market size is predicted to grow from US$ 4505 million in 2025 to US$ 7193 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 7.0% from 2026 to 2032.

Hospital bed rental refers to the service of leasing hospital-grade beds for short-term or long-term use in various settings, including private residences, nursing homes, rehabilitation centers, and healthcare facilities. This market operates within the broader Home Health Equipment Rental and Durable Medical Equipment (DME) Rental sectors.

The global hospital bed rental market is experiencing steady growth, driven by aging populations, rising chronic disease prevalence, and the accelerating shift toward home-based healthcare.

The worldwide demographic shift toward older populations is the most significant driver of hospital bed rental demand. According to the World Health Organization, the global population aged 65 and above is projected to reach 1.5 billion by 2050. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) reports that the U.S. aging population is expected to reach 98 million by 2060. Older adults are more likely to require long-term care, mobility assistance, and specialized beds for fall prevention and pressure relief. Life expectancy at age 60 continues to rise, extending the duration of care needs.

The increasing incidence of chronic conditions drives sustained demand for hospital bed rentals. According to the World Health Organization, the most common causes of global death include ischemic heart disease, stroke, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), and lower respiratory infections. Other key conditions include diabetes, arthritis, and neurological disorders. Chronic disease management often requires extended periods of bed rest or specialized positioning, making rental a more practical and cost-effective solution than purchase.

The COVID-19 pandemic accelerated the long-term trend toward home-based care. As hospitals faced capacity constraints, patients and providers turned to home care settings, driving demand for rental hospital beds for residential use. The preference for home-based care continues post-pandemic, driven by patient comfort, reduced infection risk, and lower costs compared to institutional care. The homecare segment is the largest and most rapidly growing end-user segment in the durable medical equipment rental market.

Rising healthcare costs are pushing both institutions and individuals toward rental solutions. Purchasing a hospital bed outright requires significant capital investment, while rental models allow for predictable monthly expenses and flexible commitment terms. For healthcare facilities, renting beds during peak demand periods or for short-term patient needs avoids the burden of underutilized equipment. For patients and families, rental eliminates large upfront payments and provides access to higher-quality equipment than might otherwise be affordable. The U.S. home health equipment rental market alone is substantial, reflecting the strong preference for rental over purchase.
