Indie Game Hosting Platform is a professional platform that provide technical support, resource storage, and distribution services for independent game developers or small teams. Their core functions include game code hosting, testing environment setup, server deployment, and player data storage, helping teams lacking technical infrastructure reduce development and operational costs. The platform typically also integrates version management, multi-platform adaptation, and online maintenance tools, and some offer additional services such as player communities and payment settlements, forming a complete support process from development to launch. Essentially, it allows independent developers to focus on creative design through the sharing of technical resources, reducing their investment of energy in underlying technology and server maintenance, and helping high-quality independent games efficiently reach the player market.

United States market for Indie Game Hosting Platform is estimated to increase from US$ million in 2025 to US$ million by 2032, at a CAGR of % from 2026 through 2032.
