The global Individually Pocketed Spring Mattress market size is predicted to grow from US$ 8573 million in 2025 to US$ 11865 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 4.9% from 2026 to 2032.

A pocket spring mattress is constructed by individually encasing each spring in a non-woven fabric pocket to form a core layer, which is then laminated with materials such as foam, latex, memory foam, and fabric. Key characteristics of this type of mattress include point-elastic support, silent operation with minimal motion transfer, contouring to the body's curves, and zoned support.

The upstream supply chain comprises high-carbon steel wire, non-woven fabrics, foam, latex, memory foam, textiles, adhesives, quilting materials, and packaging materials. The downstream market targets furniture showrooms, e-commerce platforms, hotels and serviced apartments, home improvement channels, elderly care facilities, as well as residential consumers who prioritize sleep comfort, motion isolation, and spinal support.

Globally, the average unit price for pocket spring mattresses stands at approximately US$350 per unit, with global sales reaching approximately 25.04 million units. The industry's annual production capacity ranges from 40 to 50 million units, and the sector maintains a profit margin of approximately 30%.

The global pocket spring mattress market is trending toward 'hybrid material integration, zoned support systems, premium comfort, and eco-friendly manufacturing.' As consumers place increasing emphasis on sleep quality, spinal alignment, and motion isolation (to minimize disturbance from a sleeping partner), pocket spring units are being increasingly combined with materials such as memory foam, latex, gel-infused foam, and breathable fabrics to create hybrid mattresses. Concurrently, key priorities for product upgrades include zoned spring systems, edge reinforcement, roll-pack packaging for shipping efficiency, the use of recyclable materials, and the adoption of low-VOC adhesives. Public market research further indicates that growth in the global mattress market is driven by heightened awareness of sleep health, technological advancements in product design, the expansion of e-commerce channels, and rising demand for premium products; within the hybrid mattress segment, pocket spring structures are frequently utilized to enhance motion isolation, provide targeted support, and improve overall durability.
