An investment trust is a public listed company, which enables unspecified investors to form a capital pool. It's designed to generate profits for its shareholders by investing in the shares of other companies. Shares in investment trusts are operated by professional agent, in that, investors could avoid some risks properly.

Investment trusts, also known as closed-end funds, are investment vehicles that have a fixed number of shares and are traded on stock exchanges like individual stocks. The performance and trends in the investment trust market can be influenced by various factors, including market conditions, investor sentiment, and economic trends. Investment trusts have gained popularity as investors seek alternatives to traditional open-end mutual funds. Closed-end funds offer unique opportunities for portfolio diversification and income generation. Many investment trusts focus on specific sectors (e.g., technology, healthcare) or regions (e.g., emerging markets, Europe). Investors are increasingly looking for specialized opportunities.
