Keratin is an insoluble protein found in epidermal tissues, such as skin, nails, and hair, and it is what helps give them strength, structure, and resilience to protect against damage and trauma. For that reason, keratin treatment has shown to have a positive role in our beauty and health. Besides giving strength and structure to your hair, nail, and skin, keratin also can act as an aid to healing wounds. It has been found to help aid healing in superficial cuts, surgical wounds, leg ulcers, diabetic foot ulcers, first- and second-degree burns, as well as skin grafts. It does this by helping to stimulate cell growth and getting healthy cells to the affected area. Many keratin supplements are made by extracting keratin from the hooves, feathers or wool of animals. Most people who take them do so because they believe the powder or pills will help make their hair and nails stronger, longer and shinier.
