Abstracts

The global Kiwi Seed Oil market size is predicted to grow from US$ 14.67 million in 2025 to US$ 19.51 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 2.8% from 2026 to 2032.

In 2024, global sales of Kiwi Seed Oil reached approximately 1 k tons, with an average market price of about USD 15000 per ton, an annual production capacity of roughly 1.8 k tons, and an industry-average gross margin of approximately 29%.

Kiwi Seed Oil is a highly unsaturated vegetable oil extracted from the tiny seeds of kiwifruit (Actinidia chinensis / Actinidia deliciosa) by cold-pressing or solvent extraction. It is exceptionally rich in alpha-linolenic acid (omega-3), with an average content of about 62% of total fatty acids, and also provides vitamin C, vitamin E and other antioxidants. Typically a pale to golden yellow, light-texture oil with fast absorption, it is widely used as a carrier oil in skin- and hair-care formulations and, in some cases, as an edible or nutraceutical oil, valued for its moisturizing, barrier-repair, antioxidant and anti-aging benefits.

On the upstream side, kiwi seed oil relies on the kiwifruit cultivation and processing chain for seed supply: seeds are recovered from juice or puree processing, then cleaned, dried and graded before being sent to cold-press or mechanical-press facilities for oil extraction, filtration and refining. Midstream companies handle bulk standardization, blending and packaging, and supply the oil via OEM/ODM and branded channels to cosmetics, personal-care, health-food and aromatherapy brands. Downstream, demand is driven primarily by skincare (facial oils, creams, lotions, balms), hair-care products, premium nutritional supplements and niche edible oils, with cosmetics and personal care representing the largest share. In practice, bulk tonnage of kiwi seed oil is converted into many small, high-value end products, so real “consumption” is dominated by brand-owner formulation demand rather than direct household use of large volumes.

The kiwi seed oil market is a small but steadily growing niche within the broader natural oils and “clean beauty” sectors, driven mainly by cosmetics, personal care and nutraceutical applications. Brands and formulators value it for its high omega-3 content and antioxidant profile, positioning it as a premium ingredient for moisturizing, barrier-repair and anti-aging products rather than a bulk commodity oil. On the supply side, the market is shaped by the availability of kiwi processing by-products (seeds), cold-pressing and refining capacity, and the ability of producers to offer certified organic and traceable origin variants that fit sustainability narratives. Competition comes both from specialized kiwi-derived ingredient suppliers and from broader botanical-oil portfolios, so differentiation increasingly depends on story-telling around origin, purity, and clinical or in-vitro data supporting skin and health benefits, as well as the ability to integrate kiwi seed oil into complex multifunctional formulations.
