Abstracts

The global Last-Mile Delivery and Value-Added Service market size is predicted to grow from US$ million in 2025 to US$ million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of %from 2026 to 2032.

Last-mile distribution refers to the last stage of the supply chain, from warehouses, logistics centers or retailers to the hands of consumers. This stage is usually the most critical and complex part of the entire logistics process, as it involves the final delivery link. Last-mile delivery needs to solve the problem of the last mile to ensure that goods can be delivered in the shortest possible time in an efficient and on-time manner. As the importance of data increases in delivery, data security and privacy will become key concerns. Service providers are required to take steps to ensure the security of customer information. Overall, last-mile delivery and value-added services will continue to adapt to market changes and introduce innovative technologies and service models to better meet rapidly changing consumer needs and environmental requirements.
