The global Layer 3 Managed Switch market size is predicted to grow from US$ million in 2025 to US$ million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of % from 2026 to 2032.

A three-layer managed switch is a network switching device used to realize the forwarding and routing functions of data packets in a computer network. It has three main functional layers, namely physical layer, data link layer and network layer. Compared with Layer 2 switches (which only have physical layer and data link layer functions), Layer 3 managed switches have more advanced routing functions. It can forward and route data packets according to the IP address of the network layer, so that data can be transmitted across different networks. This makes Layer 3 switches suitable for scenarios requiring complex routing and cross-segment communication in large-scale enterprise networks.
