Levodopa tablets are a drug used to treat Parkinson's disease and Parkinson's syndrome. Levodopa is a precursor of dopamine, which can be converted into dopamine after entering the brain, thereby replenishing the dopamine in the brain that is lacking due to Parkinson's disease. Dopamine is an important neurotransmitter responsible for regulating motor function, so Levodopa tablets can help relieve the main symptoms of Parkinson's disease, such as tremor, rigidity, bradykinesia and unsteady gait. Levodopa tablets are usually used in combination with drugs such as carbidopa or benserazide, which can inhibit the breakdown of levodopa in peripheral tissues, thereby increasing its effectiveness in entering the brain and reducing side effects caused by the conversion of levodopa into dopamine in the body, such as nausea and hypotension.
