The global Logging-While-Drilling Services market size is predicted to grow from US$ 3677 million in 2025 to US$ 6215 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 7.9% from 2026 to 2032.

Logging While Drilling (LWD) is a technology that acquires geological and engineering data in real time during the drilling process. By integrating logging tools into the drill string, LWD can collect parameters such as resistivity, density, neutrons, and acoustic waves of underground rock formations during drilling, providing real-time data support for geological modeling, reservoir evaluation, and wellbore trajectory optimization. Its characteristics are improved data acquisition efficiency, reduced time and cost for separate logging, and the ability to adjust decisions in a timely manner during the drilling process to improve the safety and economy of operations.
