Abstracts

The global Logistics Insurance market size is predicted to grow from US$ 61532 million in 2025 to US$ 84548 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 4.7% from 2026 to 2032.

Logistics insurance refers to insurance coverage services provided for the transportation, warehousing, and related liability risks involved in the logistics process. As a comprehensive risk management tool, it covers risks such as damage, loss, theft, delays, and liability claims that may occur throughout the entire logistics chain from origin to destination. It is applicable to various transportation modes, including land, sea, air, and multimodal transport. Logistics insurance not only protects against risks in enterprise logistics operations but also provides financial security and risk transfer mechanisms for supply chain participants, thereby improving overall logistics security and operational stability. The global logistics insurance gross margin is projected to be approximately 15%-30% in 2025.

The global logistics insurance market, as a key risk management tool for ensuring supply chain stability and the continuity of trade activities, is experiencing steady growth. With the increase in global trade volume, the growth in demand for international e-commerce and fast delivery, and the increasing complexity of supply chain network structures, companies are increasingly reliant on end-to-end logistics risk protection. The expansion of cross-border business places higher demands on supply chain risk exposure, causing logistics insurance to evolve from traditional 'single cargo damage compensation' to 'comprehensive supply chain protection solutions.' Meanwhile, the logistics insurance market faces challenges such as the complexity of actuarial calculations for underwriting risks and the need to improve claims efficiency. This has prompted insurance companies to actively adopt technologies such as data analytics, IoT tracking, and blockchain to enhance risk identification, pricing, and service processes, which helps improve market profitability and customer satisfaction.
