The global Logistics Warehousing Service market size is predicted to grow from US$ 310284 million in 2025 to US$ 433236 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 4.8% from 2026 to 2032.

Logistics warehousing service refers to services provided by third-party logistics providers, contract logistics companies, e-commerce fulfillment companies, or professional warehousing companies to manufacturers, brand owners, retailers, e-commerce platforms, pharmaceutical companies, cold chain customers, etc., including inventory receiving, warehousing, sorting, packaging, labeling, order fulfillment, returns processing, inventory visualization, integrated warehousing and distribution, and value-added processing. Its core value is not just "inventory," but rather improving supply chain turnover efficiency, reducing the cost of self-built warehousing for enterprises, and supporting multi-channel sales, rapid delivery, and regionalized inventory preparation through warehouse networks, WMS systems, automated equipment, transportation connections, and inventory management capabilities.

Driven by booming omnichannel e-commerce, supply chain regional restructuring, manufacturing inventory outsourcing, strict industry compliance rules and rising demand for fast last-mile delivery, Logistics Warehousing Service has transformed from basic static storage into full-stack integrated supply chain solutions covering receiving, intelligent storage, order picking, value-added processing, cross-border fulfillment, cold chain temperature control, inventory data forecasting, reverse returns management and door-to-door distribution.

Hyper-automation and AI warehouse intelligence become core competitive moats. WMS/WCS cloud-native systems, AMR robots, automated sorting lines and IoT real-time inventory tracking are widely deployed to cut labor dependency, improve space utilization and lower order error rates below 0.1%. Generative supply chain large models support dynamic demand prediction, multi-warehouse inventory allocation and labor scheduling optimization, significantly lifting overall operational efficiency.
