The global Long Term Personal Income Insurance market size is predicted to grow from US$ 10420 million in 2025 to US$ 15318 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 5.6% from 2026 to 2032.

Long term personal income insurance is a product that provides long-term income replacement protection, even until retirement age, when the insured suffers from a prolonged loss of earning capacity due to illness, accident, or long-term disability. This insurance typically takes effect after short-term disability insurance, and pays the insured a certain percentage of their income monthly as stipulated in the contract, ensuring a basic standard of living, debt repayment, and family financial stability during prolonged periods of inability to work. Its core function is to financialize the 'risk of long-term loss of earning capacity,' replacing wage income through a long-term cash flow compensation mechanism. It is one of the most important long-term protection tools in personal risk management systems and is widely used in employer benefit systems in developed countries and in private insurance planning for high-income individuals.

The future development of long-term personal income insurance shows a trend of stable growth but accelerated structural evolution. The core driving force comes from the long term income uncertainty brought about by global population aging, rising incidence of chronic diseases, and extended working lifespan. At the same time, the gradual weakening of traditional corporate pensions and long-term employee benefits forces individuals to rely more on commercial insurance to fill the long-term income risk gap. On the other hand, the expansion of remote work and freelancing has transformed the risk of long-term income interruption from a 'few occupational issues' into a 'widespread social risk.' In the future, this market will gradually evolve from the traditional fixed-sum payout model to a comprehensive income protection system integrating AI-driven dynamic pricing, health data-driven underwriting, and pension/long-term care insurance. In North America, Europe, and Australia, this product will continue to maintain mature and stable growth, while in Asia and emerging markets, it is in the early stages of accelerated penetration, possessing strong structural expansion potential in the long term.
