Lyophilization is a process that removes moisture from a product while preserving its original chemical properties. Also known as freeze drying, this process is used in the production of many products, such as pharmaceuticals, biologics, food additives, and nutraceuticals. Lyophilization helps to reduce spoilage and extend the shelf life of a product, making it more stable and easier to transport. Pharmaceutical companies use lyophilization to make lyophilized injections, eye drops, other sensitive drugs, and parenteral dosage forms that cannot be manufactured through traditional methods. In the biopharmaceutical industry, lyophilization is used to preserve proteins and peptides for long-term storage, giving unstable biologics the shelf life and stability for more widespread distribution and use.

Lyophilization contract manufacturing services are beneficial for pharmaceutical and biopharmaceutical companies who lack the necessary resources and expertise to produce their own lyophilized products. Lyophilization is a meticulous process, but with experienced professionals to help guide the way, an effective lyophilized drug can be produced in a short amount of time.
