Abstracts

The global Macadamia Milk market size is predicted to grow from US$ million in 2025 to US$ million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of %from 2026 to 2032.

Macadamia milk is produced by soaking raw nuts in the water for several hours, then blended to a puree and filtered. Macadamia trees are mostly found in Australia and are now grown in various places around the world. Popular macadamia-producing regions are Australia, South Africa, and Hawaii in the United States. The Macadamia tree belongs to the Proteaceae family's genus macadamia.

Macadamia milk is used in various products. It is consumed in several flavors such as honey-roasted, salted, roasted, chocolate coated, and Wasabi-flavoured. Macadamia milk is used in pastries, baked goods, and ice cream. The primary buyers of the snack prioritize health benefits and freshness. People are shifting toward plant-based protein sources and slowly shifting to animal-based protein sources. Macadamia milk fulfills one's daily requirement of fat and protein, without incorporating any animal protein. Additionally, people are consuming less protein from animal sources and more from plant-based sources. As a consequence, customers maintain their vegan diets without developing lactose intolerance.
