Magnetic curtains, also known as magnetic window screens or magnetic insect screens, are window coverings designed with embedded magnets that allow for easy opening and closing. These curtains are primarily used as a barrier against insects and small pests while allowing fresh air to circulate through open windows. They consist of two layers of mesh fabric, typically made from fiberglass, polyester or other lightweight, durable materials, with tiny magnets sewn or glued around the edges. When the curtains are brought together, the magnets attract and firmly hold the screen in place, creating a secure seal against the window frame.
