The global Managed Firewall market size is predicted to grow from US$ million in 2025 to US$ million in 2031; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of % from 2025 to 2031.

A managed firewall is a network security device that is installed and configured by a third-party service provider. It is designed to monitor and control incoming and outgoing network traffic based on predetermined security rules. The managed firewall service provider is responsible for the ongoing management, monitoring, and maintenance of the firewall, including updates, patches, and configuration changes.

Managed firewalls provide a layer of protection for an organization's network by blocking unauthorized access attempts, preventing malicious traffic from entering the network, and detecting and blocking potential threats. They can also provide features such as intrusion detection and prevention, virtual private network (VPN) support, and content filtering.

By outsourcing the management of the firewall to a specialized service provider, organizations can benefit from the expertise and resources of the provider, ensuring that their network security is up to date and effectively managed. This allows organizations to focus on their core business activities while having peace of mind that their network is protected from potential cyber threats.
