Marine composite flooring refers to composite material flooring/deck systems used in ships, cruise ships, yachts, commercial vessels, and offshore platforms. It achieves better lightweighting, weather resistance, slip resistance, low maintenance, and decorative effects through resins, composite core materials, cork composites, wood-plastic composites, or lightweight sandwich structures. Typical applications include cruise ship public areas and balcony decks, external decks of mega-yachts, open areas of ferries and passenger ships, partial decks of commercial vessels and workboats, and offshore platforms. Upstream raw materials mainly include polyurethane resin, synthetic polymers, cork particles, synthetic adhesives, wood flour/HDPE, and other wood-plastic composite raw materials; downstream connections include shipyards, cruise and yacht brands, offshore EPC contractors, conversion contractors, and integrators. Gross profit margin ranges from approximately 15% to 30%.
