MDO (Machine Direction Oriented) Films are advanced plastic films that undergo a stretching process in the machine direction to significantly enhance their physical properties. These films exhibit superior strength, stiffness, clarity, and barrier properties compared to standard films. The orientation process aligns the polymer chains, resulting in films that are thinner yet more durable, providing cost savings and environmental benefits through reduced material usage. High Performance MDO Films are widely used in demanding applications such as high-quality packaging, labeling, and various industrial uses, where exceptional performance and reliability are critical.
