Medical casting tape refers to a specialized type of bandage used in orthopedics to create a rigid and protective structure, known as a cast, around an injured body part. It is made of a fiberglass or polyester material that is impregnated with a water-activated resin. When the tape is properly applied and moistened, it hardens to form a sturdy and durable cast that immobilizes and supports the injured area, allowing for proper healing of bones, joints, and soft tissues. Medical casting tape is available in various widths and colors to suit different patient needs.
