The global Metal Core Wire Rope market size is predicted to grow from US$ 5737 million in 2025 to US$ 6999 million in 2031; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 3.4% from 2025 to 2031.

The impact of the latest U.S. tariff measures and the corresponding policy responses from countries worldwide on market competitiveness, regional economic performance, and supply chain configurations will be comprehensively evaluated in this report.

Metal core wire rope is a kind of wire rope with metal material as the inner core. Its core is usually composed of steel wire rope strands or independent steel wire ropes. Compared with fiber core wire rope, it has higher strength, rigidity and heat resistance. The metal core structure can provide better compression resistance and fatigue resistance, so that it has a longer service life under heavy load, high temperature or complex environment. Therefore, it is widely used in lifting machinery, mining, port hoisting, bridge construction and marine engineering. In addition, the metal core can effectively prevent rope deformation, improve overall stability, and ensure the safety and reliability of wire rope in high-intensity operations.

The metal core steel wire rope market will show a steady growth trend in the future, mainly driven by the demand of industries such as infrastructure construction, industrial manufacturing, mining, marine engineering and high-rise buildings. With the development of the global economy and the acceleration of urbanization, especially in the Asia-Pacific region and emerging market countries, the increase in large-scale engineering projects and high-rise buildings has led to an increasing demand for high-strength and fatigue-resistant steel wire ropes. In addition, the promotion of automated and intelligent lifting equipment has also promoted the development of the metal core steel wire rope market. The increase in global mining depth (some metal mines have a mining depth of more than 1,500 meters) and the trend of large-scale ports have given rise to a rigid demand for high-strength steel wire ropes. Compared with traditional fiber-core steel wire ropes, metal core steel wire ropes have higher load-bearing capacity, better compression resistance and heat resistance, and have more competitive advantages in high-load, extreme environment and long-life application scenarios. On the technical side, breakthroughs in micro-alloying treatment technology have increased the breaking tension of metal core steel wire ropes to more than 2,500 MPa, while reducing their own weight by 12%-15%. At the policy level, the EU's 'Industrial Strategy 2030' requires that the safety factor of lifting equipment be increased from 5.0 to 6.0, which directly stimulates the demand for high-end products. Therefore, the application demand in areas such as port loading and unloading equipment, wind power hoisting and offshore drilling platforms is expected to continue to increase, driving market growth.

At the same time, the tightening of environmental regulations and sustainable development goals also have a profound impact on the metal core wire rope market. With the advancement of global carbon neutrality policies, the steel industry is facing the pressure of green transformation. Reducing carbon emissions and increasing material recycling rates during production have become the focus of industry attention. Enterprises need to continuously optimize production processes, improve energy efficiency, and use environmentally friendly lubricants and anti-corrosion coatings to meet strict environmental standards. Overall, the metal core wire rope market will continue to develop in the direction of high performance and sustainability driven by multiple factors such as infrastructure construction needs, technological innovation, and environmental protection policies.
