The global Moored Buoy market size is predicted to grow from US$ 1589 million in 2025 to US$ 2433 million in 2031; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 7.4% from 2025 to 2031.

The impact of the latest U.S. tariff measures and the corresponding policy responses from countries worldwide on market competitiveness, regional economic performance, and supply chain configurations will be comprehensively evaluated in this report.

A moored buoy is an ocean observation platform fixed to the seabed by an anchor chain or cable. It is equipped with meteorological, hydrological or ecological sensors and can continuously monitor multi-level marine environmental data from the sea surface to underwater (such as wind speed, waves, water temperature, salinity, ocean currents, etc.) for a long time. Its core features are real-time data transmission capabilities (via satellite or radio) and the ability to maintain stable operation in severe sea conditions.

As the core equipment of the ocean three-dimensional monitoring network, moored buoys will accelerate their upgrades in the direction of high-precision sensing, intelligence and networking coordination in the future. With the surge in global climate change research, marine resource development and disaster prevention and mitigation needs, the new generation of moored buoys will deeply integrate the Internet of Things, edge computing and AI technologies to achieve integrated multi-parameter monitoring (such as CO2 flux, microplastics, biological noise) and adaptive data transmission.
